1. Finsterwalde Airfield (A-15):

- This field has concrete landing strips. Some of the hangars and workshops have been destroyed, but three hangars are still in use. 50X1-HUM
- Flight training takes place at the field with ME. 109s, ME. 110s, Henschel biplanes, Fieseler Storchs, and single-engined Soviet biplanes. The majority of the planes are painted gray-green and carry no markings. Training takes place from dawn to dusk.
- After training is completed at Finsterwalde the trainees go to the USSR for a special nine months' course. One of the instructors at Finsterwalde has recently returned from this course.
- Dwellings along the road from Finsterwalde to Schacksdorf have been evacuated by their German occupants so that the airfield cadre and their families might be housed.

2. Warnemünde/East (O-82):

This airfield has been evacuated by the Soviets.

3. Rostock (O-81):

This field is no longer in use.

4. Rechlin (U-33):

This field has been partly dismantled but it is still being used for intermediate landings by aircraft of the Heinkel III type. Two or three landings and take-offs were observed daily between June and 8 August 1947.

5. Anklam (U-99):

The airfield at Anklam has been completely dismantled.

6. Perleberg (T-70):

Since early August a fighter squadron of ME 192 (sic) planes is believed
